

PREPARED FOR

Dr. Priya's Skin & Hair Clinic

A full price list went out on Tuesday morning, and no appointment has come up since.

One enquiry over three days, on a personal WhatsApp account under the doctor's own name.

OBSERVED – THREE DAYS ON THE CLINIC'S WHATSAPP NUMBER

THE NUMBER LISTED PUBLICLY	A personal WhatsApp account, not a business one – the doctor's own name, no business badge.
WHAT CAME OVER THREE DAYS	A greeting, a clarifying question, the procedures for acne scarring – MNRF, dermapen, MDF – and a price for each: 9.5k, 10k, 8.5k per session.
WHAT DIDN'T AT ANY POINT	No question about the patient, and no appointment offered, on any of the three days.

A real enquiry to the number on the clinic's Google listing.

Everything asked for came back, and came back correct. What never happened is the part that decides whether any of it becomes a visit: nobody asked who this patient was, and nobody offered a time.

WHY THIS MATTERS

A price is where an enquiry becomes a booking or quietly becomes a comparison. Someone holding three numbers and no appointment thinks about it somewhere else – which never shows up as a lost patient.

CONFIRMED FROM OUTSIDE

- ✓ 5,966 patient stories on Practo against 1,613 Google reviews, with the Prime badge on the listing.
- ✓ No Meta or Google ads found – Practo is the whole paid side, so every enquiry it sends already has a cost attached.

CAN'T CONFIRM WITHOUT YOUR DATA

- Who answers that number – the doctor, the front desk, or both. The account is personal; who holds it isn't visible from outside.
- Whether Practo enquiries land here, or arrive somewhere else first.

WHAT WE'D CHECK FIRST, IF WE HAD ACCESS

- The last month of enquiries given a price – how many were offered a time, how many came in.
- Whether the questions that separate someone ready to book from someone still looking could come before the price.

What we're not saying: this isn't about how fast anyone replied; the answers were quick and correct. Nor a case for putting a machine in front of patients used to hearing from the clinic directly. It's the step between a price and someone walking in.

This isn't unique to Dr. Priya's. The real question isn't whether this one enquiry booked – it's how many were quoted a price last month, and whether anyone could say.

You can check this without us: scroll back a month and count how many price messages led to a booking. If it's worth doing properly, we'd map thirty days of enquiries at no cost to the clinic.
