

A Revenue Diagnostic for Iridescent Aesthetics

Iridescent is running close to 28 active ads across Google and Meta right now, for skin, hair, and pigmentation treatments. What we checked next wasn't the ads — it's what happens after someone actually messages.

OBSERVED — PAID AD ACTIVITY

28 active ads, live right now

Confirmed via Meta Ad Library and Google Ads — running across skin, hair, and pigmentation campaigns.

ACROSS TWO PLATFORMS, ONE SINGLE LOCATION

1 location, all of it flowing through

Every one of these ads sends a click, call, or message to the same clinic.

These are live counts pulled directly from Meta Ad Library and Google — not an estimate.

An ad account can tell you how many people saw an ad and clicked. It can't tell you what happened after they messaged — that part happens somewhere no ad platform can see.

WHY THIS MATTERS

Iridescent is a single-location clinic spending like a multi-branch one. Every one of these 28 ads pays for a click, a call, or a message — and that spend isn't refunded if the message goes unanswered. With this many clinics competing for the same patient, whoever replies first usually keeps them, and right now there's no way to see which side of that race Iridescent is on.

CONFIRMED FROM OUTSIDE

- ✓ Iridescent is running roughly 28 active ads on Google and Meta right now, for skin, hair, and pigmentation treatments.
- ✓ Reviews consistently praise Dr. Pavithra's consultations and results — the clinical side isn't in question.

CAN'T CONFIRM WITHOUT YOUR DATA

- How quickly a message outside clinic hours gets a reply — a test message sent at 11:33 PM hadn't been answered as of our last check.
- What share of people clicking these 28 ads message in and never hear back at all.

WHAT WE'D CHECK FIRST, IF WE HAD ACCESS

- Whether one person owns after-hours enquiries, or whether it depends on who's around.
- Whether Google and Meta leads are tracked separately, or land in the same inbox with no source visible.

WHAT WE'RE NOT SAYING

This isn't about the ads themselves, or the quality of care — people clearly like what they find once they're in the room with Dr. Pavithra. This is only about the gap between a click on one of these 28 ads and an actual reply.

The real question isn't whether these 28 ads work — people are clearly clicking and messaging. It's whether Iridescent is capturing everyone they're already paying for, or quietly handing some to whoever answers first. Worth finding out together?
