

PREPARED FOR

Dr. Dixit Cosmetic Dermatology Clinic

A practice that doesn't need to advertise to be found.

We sent the clinic a WhatsApp enquiry on a Tuesday night. What was still true by the next morning says less about that one message, and more about the system standing behind it.

OBSERVED – WHATSAPP ENQUIRY

TUESDAY · 9:36 PM A message was sent to the clinic's WhatsApp number, asking about the treatments on offer.
AFTER HOURS

● |
STILL UNANSWERED AT FIRST CHECK, THE NEXT MORNING

WED · ~10:00 AM A reply came about twelve hours later. No automated greeting or FIRST REPLY acknowledgement was sent in between.

This was a real message sent to the clinic's own WhatsApp number – not a guess.

One test can't tell us if this happens most nights, or if Tuesday was unusual. What it does tell us: right now, there's no way for anyone at the clinic to know either way.

WHY THIS MATTERS

Dr. Dixit runs no active paid ads – every enquiry here is earned, not bought, built on twenty years of reputation and 30,000+ Instagram followers. Someone messaging at 9:36 PM already chose her by name before typing a word. A gap like this never shows up as a complaint – it just means they spend the night deciding whether to wait, or write to someone who answers first.

CONFIRMED FROM OUTSIDE

- ✓ Dr. Rasya Dixit has practiced for 20+ years and built the clinic's following organically – 30,500+ Instagram followers, no active paid advertising, and reviews that repeatedly mention patients returning for years.
- ✓ A WhatsApp enquiry sent Tuesday at 9:36 PM went unanswered until roughly 10:00 AM the next day – about twelve hours, with no automated acknowledgement in between.

CAN'T CONFIRM WITHOUT YOUR DATA

- Whether Tuesday night was a one-off, or a pattern that repeats most evenings and weekends.
- Whether someone who messages at night and waits till morning still books anyway, or has already written to another dermatologist by then.

WHAT WE'D CHECK FIRST, IF WE HAD ACCESS

- How many enquiries land after clinic hours in a typical week, and how long each one actually waits for a first reply.
- Whether a message can be acknowledged the moment it arrives, before anyone on the team is awake to answer it.

What we're not saying: this isn't about anyone on the team being slow to care – patients repeatedly describe unhurried, detailed consultations once they're in the chair. This is only about whether that same care reaches the very first message, before someone is a patient at all.

This isn't unique to Dr. Dixit's clinic – it's one of the most common patterns we see across founder-led dermatology practices in Bangalore. The real question isn't whether one Tuesday enquiry waited until morning; it's how many nights like it happen quietly, with no record anywhere, before a message like it turns into a booked consultation.

A full audit – mapping exactly where and how often this happens – takes about 30 minutes, at no cost to the clinic.
